Author's Notes:
Drabbles are like poems...

Red hair entangled in black. His pale hands, I kissed the bruised knuckles on each one. Angelic face twisted in anger, something in me loves the contradiction. I've never felt so enchanted. I was helpless as he yelled and ranted. Anything could cause his anger. Shattering glass made me jump, and I loved the quickened beat of my heart. Only he could make me feel so alive and on the edge of disaster. He was a beautiful mess, his cheeks hectic and flushed as red as his hair. I wanted him completely, even when the anger was directed at me.
